INTERVIEWING THE DEMOCRACY.—A Chronicle reporter has been interviewing the leading Democrats of the Comstock and finds them almost a unit for Tilden. The late Chester Hull's opinion of an interviewer is called to mind. He defines him as "a man who elicits important conclusions from people who never have any views." In the Chronicle's report the most ordinary sort of people talk like statesmen as they cast their prophetic eyes along the political horizon. For instance: the scribe walks into a grocery store and bawls out, "Hello, Bill, how's tricks?" "Bully; have a smile!" "Don't mind if I do. Who do you think's goin' to get away with the business in the campaign?" "Well, Tilden's the boss with me. He's the clean thing rolled in sand." "Think he'll win?" "Bet yer life; he'll knock the stuffin' out of any man the Repubs put up. Here's luck."

The two hoist in four fingers of old Bourbon, the reporter rushes back to the office and the result of the interview is as follows: The gentleman's personal choice was for Tilden.

"He is my choice above all others," said the Colonel.

"He embodies the principles upon which the Democratic party go into the Presidential contest. He is a civilian, and we need a civilian at the head of the government. He is a man who understands and reveres the Constitution, and the Constitution is greatly in need of protection in these days of centralization. Above all, the great fraud of 1876 must be rebuked in such a manner by the American people that there will never be an attempt to repeat the crime. Tilden is personally the greatest sufferer by that fraud, and it could in no other way be so thoroughly and strikingly condemned as by his re-election."

"The re-election of Tilden would be the most crushing condemnation that could be given the fraud of '76. He feared, however, that the unworried abuse heaped by the Republican press upon Mr. Tilden ever since the Republicans counted him out might have an effect upon his chances, as when a great deal of mud is thrown some of it is very likely to stick." He thought Tilden could easily beat Grant, nevertheless.

JURISPRUDENTIAL TAFFY.—Last evening, in the course of his speech to the Jury in the McFadden-Babcock case, Colonel Ellis paid a high compliment to Mr. Soderberg on the clear and disinterested manner in which he had given his testimony. Mr. Soderberg, who was sitting near the Colonel, looked bewildered and appeared as if he saw the beauty of the compliment as threw a glass, darkly.

DEPARTURES.—The following passengers departed per southern stage yesterday morning: J. Mattfeldt, O. Mattfeldt, H. Gregovich, D. C. Ostrich, Mrs. Burton, E. B. Shaw, M. Tobey, Ed. Luce, H. W. Lawrence, R. Jenkins, R. Case.

A "JOTTING" FROM THE TRIBUNE.—Short handed to-day—"devil" out of town. The "Deacon" has gone up to Walley's Springs to retort.

ARRIVALS.—The following persons arrived on the southern stage yesterday morning: Mrs. Traver, J. Cavanaugh, G. C. Becker.

A man reached Virginia City yesterday with a requisition from the Governor of New York for the arrest of one Lipman, who is charged with embezzlement and obtaining money under false pretenses. Lipman, however, disappeared just before the officer arrived. Lipman's son says there is nothing in the charge but does not give any substantial reasons for his father's disappearance.

The Western Union Telegraph Company will reduce rates on the first of April all along the line.

John Mackey is back in Virginia City, hard at work of course, running a car on the 1650 level.

The Baldwin Theater Company talk of coming up this way soon.

A good many people are going to the springs for their health.

ROMANCE IN REAL LIFE.

CONDENSED FROM THE FORTHCOMING NOVEL BY OTTO GREENHOOD.

CHAPTER I.

It was about half past 10 o'clock one morning, in the bustling little village of Carson, when a lad might have been seen sauntering along the streets, looking anxiously at the shop windows with a two-bit piece in his hand. Presently he saw a sign in large gilt letters over a store and went in. It might have been the sign, and it might have been the store, that attracted him. Laying his money on the counter he called for a Gem Puzzle of small size. The genial man behind the counter gave him the puzzle and a short bit. The twenty-five-cent piece fell into the drawer with a dull thud and, the boy melted into the dust of the open street.

CHAPTER II.

A small boy, whom the reader will recognize as the one who was in the store, was seated on a low stool, sliding the blocks of the Gem Puzzle from place to place.

"Billy," called a sharp shrill voice.

He made no reply.

"Billy," was uttered in more pronounced accents.

Still the indomitable and patient boy remained at his task.

"Billy!" was vociferated in still louder tones.

There was no reply, and a moment later a strong red right hand lifted the boy on the side of the head and sent him whirling across the room, scattering the numbers of the Gem Puzzle in every direction.

"Mother," said the tearful youth, "You've busted the combination. I was just about to make the rifle."

The old woman then gazed upon the ruin she had wrought, and clasping the child to her bosom, cried, "Forgive me, my only son."

They wept together until the advancing shadows of evening stole over the green baize sofa, the worn three-ply carpet, the grand piano and the wash tubs in the next yard alike.

CHAPTER III.

Midnight. The boy sat up in bed by the light of a lonely candle, still wrestling with the great problem of the age. A step was upon the stairs. He heard it not. A man entered softly, and reaching the boy flung him with a quick, strong effort across his knee. The sound of falling blows echoed through the stillness of the house. It was the paternal hand of correction wielding the sceptre of Justice from the throne of Law and Order. The boy was laid in bed, sobbing bitterly. The parent laid him down with his face to the white ceiling, but he soon turned over and hid his moist nose in the pillow.

Perhaps he didn't like the first position.

Who would?

CHAPTER IV.

When the father left the blubbering son he took away the puzzle. Ten minutes later the old man was seated on the floor absorbed in the workings of the great invention.

"Are you coming to bed, John?"

There was no reply.

Presently the old lady got up and tried to assist him in some moves on the fourth row.

"Slide the 'leven back, John."

He could bear it no longer. Their married life had been happy, but language like that was too much. Seizing a twelve-dollar rocking chair he brained her on the spot and went on with his work.

CHAPTER V.

The boy rose with the lark and forgetting to get his wood, rushed down town and purchased another puzzle. At school he had it down behind his desk still determined to work the problem to the end. At half past 9 he was across the teacher's knee.

It pained him to be there. After the ceremonies were over the teacher took away his puzzle and tried it herself.

That afternoon the boy went home and found his mother dead and his father crazy. He sent for the Relief Committee, the Temperance Reform Club and the Episcopal Sewing Society, and asked that they bury the family and include him without extra charge. Swallowing the puzzle he immediately expired.

Sad are the lessons of life. The man who sold the puzzle still walks the streets and mingles in the best society.

EASTER EGGS.—To-morrow will be Easter Sunday, the greatest day in the Christian year except, perhaps, Christmas. The truly pious even give Easter the preference, but the worldly consider the Winter anniversary the best. Everybody must have an Easter egg to-morrow, and it is estimated that there is not an egg in town now that is not colored. Few people know exactly how to color Easter eggs. It boiled in pitch they will be black. A bright yellow hue can be obtained by mixing a couple of pounds of gold dust in the pot where the eggs are boiled and stirring it rapidly for half an hour with a wooden spoon. One cannot imagine the beauties of the result until the eggs are gilded. The pot must not be stirred, however, when the eggs are in it. A handful of tender Spring grass thrown into the pot will give the eggs a green hue, but a few pounds of verdigris intensifies the color. The last named compound impregnates the eggs, and a basketful of them distributed to a juvenile base ball club will cause the death of the entire line in twenty minutes. This information is strictly confidential.

McFADDEN VS. BABCOCK

THE CASE CLOSED LAST NIGHT—SUMMARY OF THE EVIDENCE—THE JURY STILL OUT.

The testimony in the case of McFadden vs. Babcock was all in yesterday afternoon and the arguments were finished last night. The trial has occupied considerable time from the fact that it was all reduced to writing as it came from the witnesses.

THE PLAINTIFF'S STATEMENT.

McFadden, the plaintiff, sued for $375, money which he alleges Babcock deducted from him when he was Deputy Secretary of State. He testified that at the time he took the place of deputy for Babcock he was told by defendant that $125 was all that he could afford to give him. He was paid by a warrant at the State Treasurer's office. The warrants were for $250 each, and he paid $125 to Babcock. He afterward ascertained that he was legally entitled to the full $250 and made a demand on Babcock for the back pay, $375 being the amount which had been taken from him. He thought at the time that the salary he received came from Babcock's private pocket. He had paid $200 to Babcock in Chesley's presence and got back $125. Chas. Martin, former deputy for Babcock, swore that when he was sick he had signed a blank for his pay which he afterwards found was drawn in favor of Tom Tennant. Soderberg, one of the attorneys for the plaintiff, testified that when he made the demand on Babcock for the money he did not deny the claim. He asked the defendant, "Did you receive the money?" at which Babcock replied, "I won't say, there might have been money left here for some one else."

BABCOCK'S TESTIMONY.

Babcock, the defendant, denied that he had ever received a cent from McFadden. On the contrary he had paid him in full for his services. He denied point blank every allegation which the plaintiff had made.

CHESLEY'S TESTIMONY.

James Chesley, the present Deputy for Babcock, testified that McFadden had agreed to pay him $125 a month while in the office, but it was prior to his appointment as deputy. He denied that McFadden had ever paid Babcock $200 in his presence. In April and May the witness had assisted McFadden in the office and received $125 a month for his services. In June he did not require anything from McFadden because McFadden's wife was confined and he thought that the plaintiff needed the money.

THE ARGUMENTS.

The Court limited the time for argument, and Col. Ellis opened at 7 o'clock and spoke for three quarters of an hour. He was followed by Gen. Clarke who spoke for one hour. Col. Ellis closed for the plaintiff, speaking three-quarters of an hour.

The jury brought in a verdict for the plaintiff at 12 o'clock last night. Amount of judgment will be determined this morning.

HOTEL ARRIVALS.

ORMSBY HOUSE, SHARP BROTHERS PROPS.—W. A. Johnson, San Francisco; Charles B. Armstrong, Kansas City; W. J. Reid, East Saginaw, Mich.; Chambers, do; L. F. Shepard, Elmira, N. Y.; N. Hanton and wife, Bridgeport; James Cavanaugh, Bodie; E. J. Heines, San Francisco; Geo. C. Becker, Bodie.

THE BENEFIT TO-NIGHT.—In addition to the musical and literary features of to-night's entertainment at the Opera House, which will embrace vocal music and recitations, there will be a dance, the latter commencing at 9 and closing at 12 o'clock. The Davis Family will furnish the dancing music, which means that it will be first-class. Many friends of the Reform Club have complained that the Carson club, unlike the Virginia and Reno institutions, has not given the lovers of dancing a chance to enjoy themselves, and now a splendid one is offered. For fifty cents you can hear good singing and artistic recitations, besides three hours dancing, together with the knowledge that you are contributing to a worthy cause.

EXPLANATORY.—On Thursday morning the Times contained an account of a visit to the APPEAL office which we did not consider in good journalistic taste, from the fact that the writer had received the kindest treatment while calling upon us. Yesterday morning Mr. Niles informed the APPEAL reporter that he wrote the article prior to calling, and the visit of the evening before the article appeared was merely a coincidence. This being the fact, and we place full confidence in Mr. Niles' assertion, he stands acquitted of the only serious charge we made against him: boorishness and a lack of regard for the amenities of his profession. Our latch string still hangs dependent on the outer wall.

Carson has changed a time-honored maxim thus: "People who do business in store houses should not throw glass."

Capt. Jack and his party left for Enreka yesterday. Mr. Russell Soggs will continue as manager.

WE CAN'T TALK

Without showing the condition of our teeth. Every laugh exposes them. In order not to be ashamed of them let us use that standard dentifrice, SOZODONT, which is sure to keep them white and spotless. No tartar can encrust them, no canker effect the enamel, no species of decay infest the dental bone, if SOZODONT is regularly used. It is a botanical preparation, and its beneficial effects on the teeth and gums are marvelous, as it removes all discolorations, and renders the gums hard and rosy.

MUSICAL.—Miss Lizzie Davis, of Virginia City, teacher of the violin, comes to Carson every Monday and remains until Wednesday. Adults or children wishing to become rapid and correct performers on the violin, and to acquire a profound knowledge of musical time and to read readily, also generally musical theory can get all necessary information as to terms etc., by inquiring of C. A. Marston, photographer, or at the Arlington House. Lessons in dancing given by Brown & Davis at Arlington Hall every Tuesday from 11 A.M. till 9 P.M. Social every night after dancing school.

A DRY GOODS DREAM.—A woman who goes into M. Cohn's emporium drifts off into a dream of rare and beautiful feminine finery. She sees the best product of foreign looms piled up on the counters, laces, draperies, illusions and elegant toilette materials, such as only the rarest skill can produce and which women of taste admire. The secret of the success of this house lies in the fact that M. Cohn knows how to select the best and is never imposed upon by the eastern houses who work off their inferior goods on inexperienced persons.

ATTENTION!—The greatest wonder yet discovered in medicine is Mrs. Dr. Howe's celebrated rheumatism, neuralgia and toothache cures. Would you rather suffer the pain of having a tooth drawn than buy a bottle of Mrs. Dr. Howe's toothache medicine? Mothers should not be without it for their infants. A few drops in a little sweetened water to swab a teething baby's mouth will instantly relieve the little sufferer. The medicine does not canterize, and is very pleasant. Sold by all druggists.

PROFESSOR LANGER'S MUSIC CLASS.—Prof. Langer, the well known leader of Piper's Orchestra, has started a music class in Carson. He has already received a number of scholars from the best families in the city, and his thorough methods of instruction give the best of satisfaction. He gives vocal and instrumental instructions and teaches on the piano and violin. He will give lessons on Wednesday of each week. Orders can be left at the APPEAL office.
